Core Disruption: Innovative multiplayer tank combat game in virtual reality set to release on Steam and Oculus in May, 2022

Implements simulation sickness reduction technology

March 7, 2022, College Park, MD – Core Disruption takes an unconventional approach to VR gaming using new technology that reduces the onset of simulation sickness. The game offers the immersive experience only VR can provide while maintaining a familiar and personalized user experience.

Core Disruption, developed by VR studio MPLEX, will be released on Steam and Oculus in May, 2022. Wishlist Core Disruption now.

Launching as a cross-play, team-centric, competitive multiplayer experience with a low barrier to entry for players who may not have experience with VR, Core Disruption offers players traditional keyboard/mouse accessibility, high-fidelity graphics and sound, deep player progression, customization, and a variety of different playstyles. The experience is designed to be comfortable even to players who are ordinarily susceptible to VR "simulation sickness."

MPLEX has developed Core Disruption to bring the competitive thrill of esports to the virtual reality community, offering an immersive PVP experience to gamers, with access to 1v1 and 4v4 combat scenarios. MPLEX has plans to support the game by expanding to larger game modes and additional content such as new vehicles, skins, and other personalized elements. The studio recently hosted the Core Disruption World Premiere Esports Tournament at the University of Maryland, where teams competed for cash prizes.

CEO of MPLEX, Galen Stetsyuk, says, "We developed Core Disruption to reduce as many barriers to VR as possible, and currently, one of the biggest barriers is simulation sickness. With the game's modern features, we plan on creating a passionate VR community that can finally enjoy a high-quality, multiplayer experience that is immersive, sustainable, and accessible."
